2024 has been a good year for Ian McFarland, racking up editorial placements with Spotify, Apple Music, and Amazon Music, receiving airplay on KEXP, KCRW, WODU, WERU, WLFR, CJUM, KRVM, KVNF, WFIT, WGDR, WMNF, Radio Max Music, WMVY, WXPB, KUPR, WHFR, KXRY, KZUM, WPKN, KCBX, KXLU / KLMU Online Radio, WUTK, CHMR, KFAI, KKFI, KMUD, and more, as well as performing around the northeastern United States including continuing a multi-year monthly residency in the Lower East Side of Manhattan at Book Club Bar as well as small festival and many small venue performances typically ranging from 70–300 capacity.

To close out 2024, McFarland releases his first ever Christmas music, “When Are You Coming Home (It’s Christmas Time),” which features an emotional variety of lenses to view the holidays. The title track, “When Are You Coming Home (It’s Christmas Time),” is an emotional ballad longing to bring a family member, in this case, Ian’s older brother Tyler, home to spend the holidays together as a family. The ballad features a lush arrangement of strings, vocal ostinatos, and other beautiful instruments. The second track, “It’s the Holidays Again,” is a non-denominational holiday bop featuring slide guitar playing, an upbeat tempo, and cheery lyrics. “It’s Christmas Time (I Love You)” is a sensual and sentimental ballad featuring complex chord structures, soaring falsettos, and classic and vivid holiday lyricism.

McFarland has shows coming up around the New York City area and you can follow him across all social platforms @itsianmcfarland or on streaming platforms to find out more.
